

State opens new Bryce Hospital in Tuscaloosa to replace historic campus

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
May 21, 2014 - 5:52 pm EDT

A A A Share / Save

TUSCALOOSA, Alabama — State and local officials in Tuscaloosa are celebrating upgrades to a state psychiatric hospital.

Gov. Robert Bentley, Department of Mental Health Commissioner Jim Reddoch and other officials took part in the dedication ceremony Wednesday for the new Bryce Hospital in Tuscaloosa.

Officials say the 260,000 square foot facility includes 268 patient beds, a neighborhood clinical therapy area, a recovery center and more.

Bentley says upgrades to the facility cost $81 million and was built after the Department of Mental Health sold the hospital's property to the University of Alabama.

Bryce was considered a national model of humane care when it opened in 1861.

The hospital was the subject of a landmark federal court lawsuit in the 1970s that led to changes in the way mental patients are treated nationwide.

Think your friends should see this? Share it with them!

Like Share Be the first of your friends to like this.

All comments are moderated before posting. Your email address must be verified with Disqus in order for your comment to appear.

View our commenting guidelines and FAQ's here.

We also have more stories about:
(click the phrases to see a list)

Category:

- Alabama

Places:

- Alabama
- Tuscaloosa

Win Duck Dynasty Tickets!