

MEMO to Self-Advocates, Families, and Other Stakeholders

The department is sponsoring a series of Human Rights Committee events facilitated by Amy Tabor and Tina Campanella to support people with lived experience, their families, and other stakeholders to work in conjunction with Human Rights Committees. These presenters are life-long disability professionals who have provided rights training with service providers in many settings across the United States.

Amy, a native Alabamian, is a co-author of a best-selling book on Human Rights Committees, actively facilitates Human Rights Committees and develops Human Rights Committee members. Tina, an AAIDD Fellow, was the Executive Director of The Quality Trust for Individuals with Disabilities in the District of Columbia, promoting and providing strong advocacy.

Together, Amy and Tina bring their knowledge, experiences, and practical applications to support people in their efforts to ensure they live fuller and more abundant lives through the operation of effective Human Rights Committees.

Each training occurs from 5pm to 8pm. Regional trainings will take place at the follow times and locations:
